Miracle Worker: Dermablend Quick-Fix Concealer

With a sleep cycle as effed up as mine, it's no surprise that I have these massive dark circles south of my pupils. No matter what I do, they never go away and I've resorted to stalking every Sephora/ drugstore/ online retailer for something that can make me look somewhat human.

I sent an S.O.S and the gods (the PR gods that is) came calling.

Dermablend's Quick Fix Concealer SPF 30 is a full coverage concealer that can be used to cover up many of your skin imperfections. When I heard Dermablend provided up to 12 hours of wear, I was nothing but skeptical. I find it hard to believe that one product can last that long but I decided to stop my worrying and give it a go.

Strong enough to hide tattoos the folks at Dermablend are on to something.

This concealer has a smooth and blendable formula leaves skin feeling soft. It hides just enough under my eyes without looking like I slathered makeup on. The best part is a little bit goes a long way when using it.

I also use it under the eye and up towards the bridge of the nose for a "bright-eyed" effect. This stick is light enough to let my skin breathe, yet heavy enough to erase the dark circles -- if only temporarily.
