

beauty

 subscribe to beauty blog via RSS

BEAUTY Counter blog

NATURAL BEAUTY

Dermablend Brushes Up

April 15, 2011 1:38 pm

recent posts

The All-Natural Paraben Alternative Cometh

Earthly Delights

Beyoncé Goes Blonder, And More...

Topshop Beauty Is Ready For Spring

A New Japanese Hybrid

Singing Summer's Siren Call

Scarlett Does Dolce; Trump, Lagerfeld Do Fragrance; And More...

Body Oil, Low And High

White Hot

Polishing Up In Boston

departments

For most people, makeup brushes are an afterthought. Essential as they may be, they don't often receive the same careful, pre-purchasing consideration as your actual makeup. They should. Besides distributing product far more effectively, a better brush won't disintegrate a little every time you use it, leaving a trail of bristles across your face—a fact that hasn't been lost on Dermablend. The brand best known for skin-perfecting pigments so potent that they can camouflage everything from tattoos to rosacea is now expanding its reach to include environmentally-friendly brushes. The four-piece collection, which includes tools for concealer, face and body, foundation, and powder, is naturally crafted entirely without animal hair and with handles constructed using recycled aluminum and bamboo, one of the world's most renewable and sustainable resources. Besides being extraordinarily soft, each brush is designed with specially tapered bristles for optimal application. And, perhaps unsurprisingly, they all happen to work beautifully in tandem with Dermablend's famous foundations.

—Fiorella Valdesolo

Photo: Courtesy of Dermablend

tags: Dermablend, Makeup

Beauty Insider
Behind The Tear Sheet
Blackbook
Celebrity Looks
Industry News
Ingredients Deciphered
Natural Beauty
Hose Candy
Street Beauty
The Doctor Is In
The Stock List
Uncategorized

categories

Hair
Makeup
Skincare
Fragrance